

Families and Societies

SOC 2093

DEGREE PROGRAM COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

This course examines the diversity of the family as an institution in contemporary society. Students will study changing patterns of family development, including topics such as relationships within the family, problems facing families, and interactions between families and other social institutions.

PREREQUISITES?

ENGL 0203, adequate placement score, or by meeting determined placement measures

CREDIT HOURS

3